When the System Becomes the Stress: The Hidden Cost of Poor UX

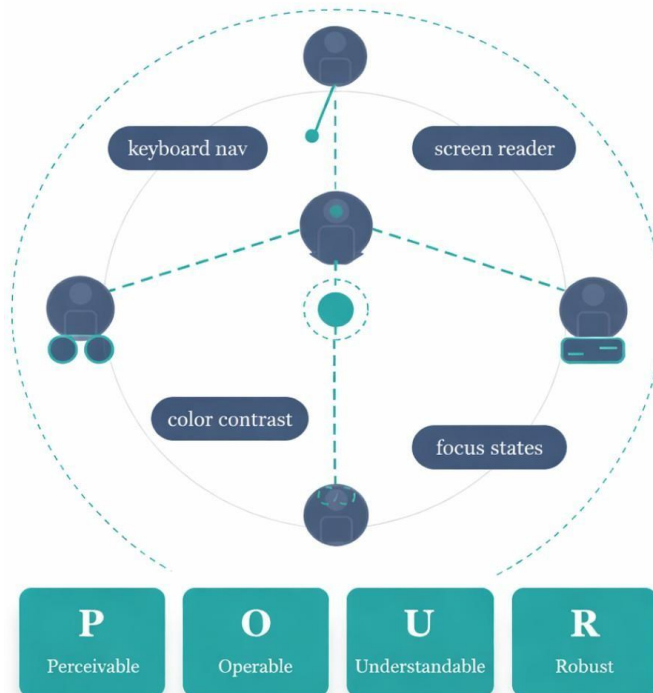

Burnout doesn't always come from workload — sometimes it comes from the systems people use every day. In our latest blog, we explore how confusing workflows, repetitive tasks, and inefficient digital experiences quietly impact productivity, morale, and team performance.

Learn why investing in better UX is not just a design decision, but a business decision.

Accessibility Isn't an Add-On — It's Day One

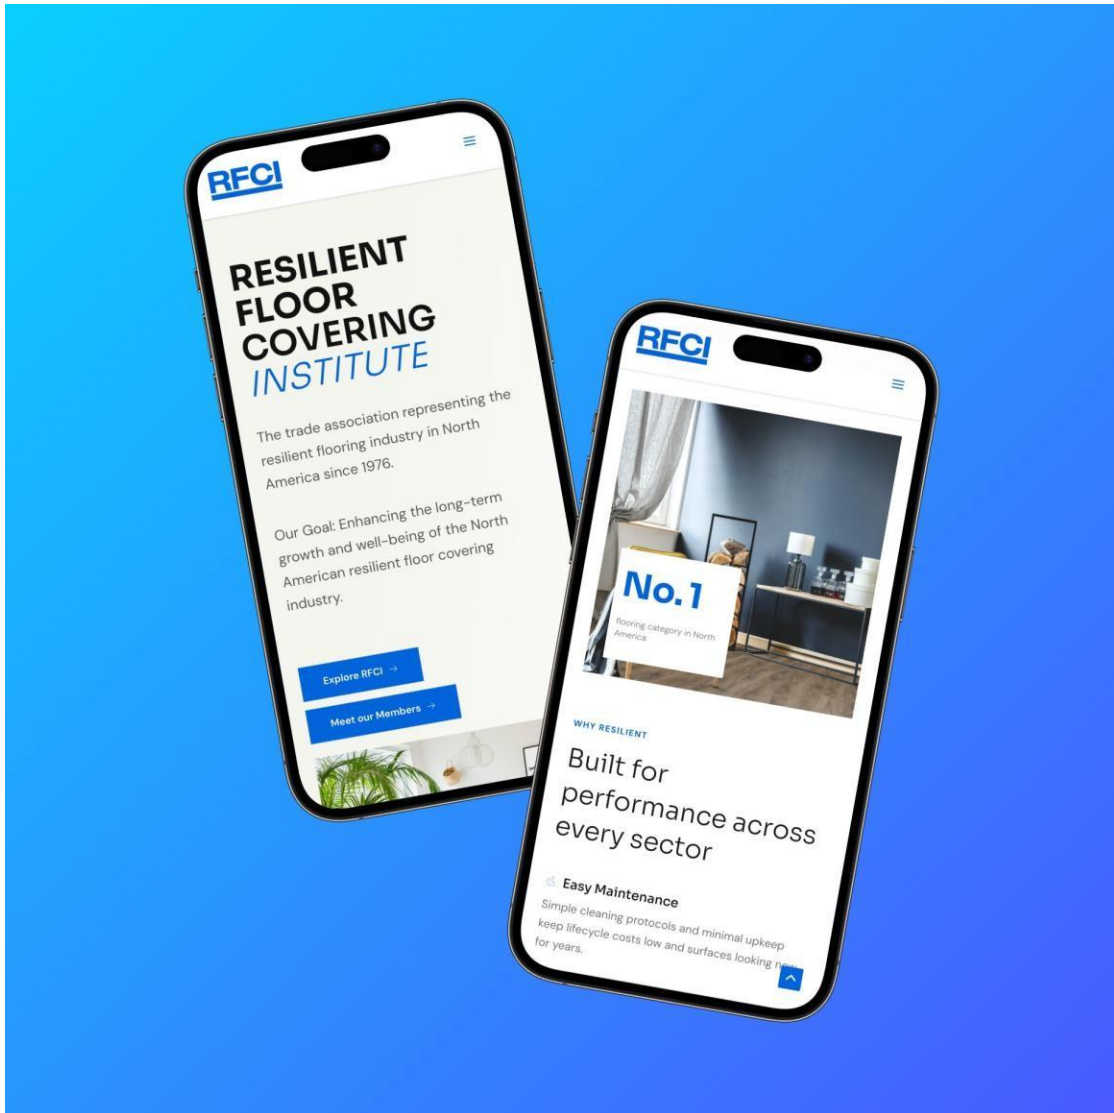

98% of the world's top websites still have at least one accessibility failure — not because teams don't care, but because accessibility keeps getting pushed to the end of the process.

In this piece, we make the case for building inclusivity into digital products from the very first wireframe. From the Curb-Cut Effect to the real cost of fixing it later, this is a practical read for anyone building technology that's meant to work for everyone.

May Milestone: The RFCI Website Is Live

We're excited to share a key May milestone: the launch of the refreshed RFCI website. The updated experience features a new logo, updated branding, and a streamlined structure to help visitors find relevant information faster—whether they're exploring flooring types, certifications, or membership resources. This launch also sets a stronger foundation for future content and enhancements.

"Working with Azul Arc on our new website and logo has been an outstanding experience. In just a few short months, the team delivered two incredible outcomes with remarkable creativity, professionalism, and commitment to timelines. The vision, leadership, and thoughtful execution behind this effort truly stood out. The Azul Arc team was magnificent throughout the engagement, and their work will be showcased in front of over 100 top executives in our industry. We are proud of what was created together and deeply thankful for the partnership !!!!!"
